Paper Donated By Flambeau River Papers

Since 1961, The Ruffed Grouse Society has been the only international organization advocating forest management practices to create and maintain diversity of habitat required by ruffed grouse, American woodcock, deer and many songbird species. Our habitat improvement efforts on public lands result in widespread conversion of mature growth forests into more diverse, grouse supporting habitat through small-block timber harvesting. As a member, your contribution will be put to work immediately in new research, landowner education and hands-on habitat improvement – thus ensuring that our legacy will carry to future generations.
